Are you prepared for an emergency?

Mildred, a 68 year old woman on medication for hypertension, is in the dental chair awaiting her semi-annual cleaning when she casually mentions she's been feeling a heaviness in her chest. By the time you turn around, Mildred appears to be unconscious and not breathing. Do you know what to do?

Or maybe it's one of your own parents. Whenever there is a medical emergency, time is of the essence. Would you know what to do? Do you need training on how to respond?

Learn what you can do to help save a life.

Basic First Aid and CPR training teaches you signs and symptoms of physical injuries or illnesses and gives you the ability to render appropriate assistance or aid.

American Safety & Health Institute

ASHI programs are designed to provide basic knowledge and the skills necessary in an emergency. Students will learn to recognize the emergency, call for help and provide basic life support for a victim until professional medical help arrives.

These programs also include information on the prevention of injury and illness by focusing on early warning signs, accident and injury prevention and healthy life styles.

Overall, students will learn the importance of expedited care and ensuring no further harm comes to the victim.
